NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Information has reached The Journal that some unauthorized person has been attempting to make collections for the paper. The only authorized collectors representing The Pensacola Journal in the city are: Chas. F. Steward, W. Penn, Carl Cushman, Jessy H. Bryan, Emanuel I. Quinn. Be sure to pay no others as their receipts will not be countenanced by the office. Do not pay the carriers. They are not authorized to collect money for The Journal. Payments made to any others than those whose names are given are made at Subscriber's risk. FRED A. SWEET, Manager Circulation.

Get Copy in Early for Thanksgiving Edition.

Advertisers who do not want to get crowded out of next Sunday's Special Thanksgiving Edition should get their copy in early.

By early, we mean to-day or to-morrow—after that it will be hard to guarantee that the advertisement will appear. These advertisements all have to be got up in advance for there are not enough printers in town to handle in one or two days all the matter that The Journal expects to print next Sunday.

The Thanksgiving edition will contain 16 pages, with a large number of exceptionally interesting features, and for advertisers it will afford one of the finest opportunities for reaching the winter buyers that could be secured.

The Journal does not want anyone to be disappointed and it therefore asks that advertising copy for this big paper be sent in not later than to-morrow night.

The Journal's editorial Sunday morning showing that Pensacola's bank deposits are now the largest in the history of the city, was regarded as such good advertising of the town that one business man ordered several thousand slips, containing the editorial, printed and he will inclose one in each letter which he sends away from here.

Closer Relations

With Baldwin County.

The Mobile Register contains a very interesting editorial on a subject which The Journal, representing this end of the line, took up more than six months ago. The Register says:

If Baldwin county is going to be one of the most thickly settled and prosperous sub-divisions of the state, and there is actually to be a loading port in the lower bay on that side of the water, as the railroad officials of the Louisville and Nashville intimate we do not think that the present round about way of reaching that territory, via Bay Minette, will long serve satisfactorily the enterprising business men of Mobile. Neither will transportation by water meet the needs of the city. It is time that Mobile should begin to consider the question of a bridge to unite Mobile and Baldwin counties at Mobile. This is not a new proposition. It was mooted a good many years ago in connection with the idea of bringing the dwellers of the eastern shore into closer relations with Mobile. Now that Baldwin is developing rapidly and enormously as an agricultural county, there is more reason than before for considering the question of building a bridge. Electric traction also has come to be a new factor in transportation of passengers and goods, and by the use of this facility a great extent of territory can be profitably opened up to Mobile. The eastern shore would become a very popular at an average price of fifty cents. Now Maine has nothing for this purpose that can approach the beauty of the Florida holly or yupon or bay, with glowing berries or verdant leaves and the trailing moss that is usually supplied by nature or may be transferred by art. What of delicate ferns found everywhere in December, where dense vegetation and abundance of water make them possible? What of the satin trees of South Florida, with their leaves of vivid green on one side, and warm brown on the other, and their delicious fragrance? Why not Florida claim a revenue from this source that, invested in gardens or plantations would continue to multiply?

A cabinetmaker was ordered by his physician to leave the climate of Canada for the alleviation of his rheumatism. He was unable to attend his business regularly, but to dispose of his idle time made a chessboard for a friend, in which the squares were made up of different colored Florida woods. This excited the admiration of a dealer in his town, and out of this has grown a paying business. Articles of furniture or bric-a-brac of these woods, and mosaics composed of them, now net the invalid more than the labor of the artisan once commanded. He has become an artist, and names his prices.

Last summer a man from Ohio, with some knowledge of natural history, was stranded in Florida. He found himself on the seacoast and made a collection of crabs, birds, eggs, etc. He is now a Floridian because he has a business here, and his specimens mounted on slabs of Florida woods command remunerative prices and a ready market.

These are but examples of what may be done here. The wonder is that factories are not erected to replace the higher priced handwork along these lines. In other states and countries there are great establishments for the manufacture of such goods. Why not in Florida, where the raw material is abundant and cheap?

The Modesty of Hokusai.

Young artists, not gaining distinction early, have had various instances to quote as showing that mastery performance often came late in life. In Dora Amsten's book on Japanese art it is set forth that this is what the celebrated Japanese artist Hokusai wrote about himself: "From the age of six I had a mania for drawing the forms of things. By the time I was fifty I had published an infinity of designs, but all I have produced before the age of seventy is not worth taking into account. At seventy-five I learned a little about the real structure of nature of animals, plants and trees, birds, fishes and insects. In consequence, when I am eighty I shall have made still more progress. At ninety I shall penetrate the mystery of things. At a hundred I shall certainly have reached a marvelous stage, and when I am 110 everything I do—be it but a line or dot—will be alive. I beg those who live as long as I do to see if I do not keep my word." Hokusai died in 1849 at the age of eighty-nine.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Crazy people never think they are crazy. Are you crazy?

The average person places too much confidence in an apology.

People are not so much interested in your grievances as you think they are. It is one thing to appreciate a compliment and another thing to swallow it.

A woman never used powder that a man didn't notice it. But women say, "Men are so easily fooled!"

Men don't like men very well; women don't like women very well either. And men quarrel with women sometimes.

When a man regrets that he didn't get much schooling in his youth, somehow his sons who have to go to school don't sympathize with him as much as he expected.—Acheson Globe.

"By the way they fight I can tell men's nationality," said a policeman. An Englishman, when he is going to fight, throws his hat and coat in a bustling, blinding way on the ground. A Scot pulls his hat down tight on his head and buttons his coat carefully. The canny Scot is not going to endanger any of his property. An Irishman appeals to the crowd to hold his coat. The Celtic nature desires sympathy and tries to build it up. A German, methodical, precise, folds his coat in a neat bundle and lays his hat on top of it to hold it down. An American is so anxious to pitch in and have the thing over that he starts fighting without giving a thought to hat or coat.—New York Press.

The London Police.

When the scheme was first broached fierce opposition developed to the establishment of London's metropolitan police, in September, 1829. Police to patrol the streets of London? Such a scheme was "repugnant to the spirit of English law and to the theory of free government," according to an editorial in the Standard of the day. "As a system of clandestine intelligence the thing is complete," it went on. "The how constable is instructed to make himself acquainted with the inhabitants of every house within his beat. And how is this information to be obtained but by the pumping of the servants?"

A Severe Test.

Don't ask a girl to marry you after dark when she is dressed fit to kill. Call on her, and when you leave inadvertently drop a glove on the piano. Return for it the next morning at 9 o'clock. If she comes to the door with one shoe and one slipper on, her hair done up in curl papers, dressed in an old Mother Hubbard, our advice is to take to the woods. But if she appears in a neat house dress, her hair done up and a rose in the top of her hair, grab her quick.—Marionville (Mo.) Free Press.

SAID OF PENSACOLA AND PENSACOLIANS.

The Pensacola Journal of last Sunday contained the cheering announcement that for the first time since the announcement of the outbreak of fever there, not a single case was under treatment. That there was no spread of the disease outside that city is a matter of sincere congratulation, and a lasting monument to the efficient work of Dr. Porter and his assistants.—De Funak Breeze.

Tallahassee's Congratulations. Tallahassee congratulates Pensacola upon her victory over yellow fever and the relief from the quarantine restrictions.—Tallahassee Capital.

Liberality of the L. & N. The employees of the L. & N. are loud in their praise of the liberal treatment of the company during the quarantine. Not only were those who had to stay outside that city boarded free by the company, and every possible arrangement made for their comfort, but those whose pay depended upon the mileage run, received pay for the eighteen miles between the relay camp and Pensacola. Is it any wonder that the boys swear by the "old man" as Superintendent Saltmarsh is affectionately termed?—De Funak Breeze.

Triumph to Science. Science has triumphed over yellow fever both at New Orleans and Pensacola. Only a few sporadic cases are now reported from either place. It will not be many years before authorities will have this dreaded disease under complete control through scientific treatment. In a large measure they have succeeded with the present epidemics at the above mentioned.—De Land Record.

Refugees Returning. The refugees from Pensacola are now returning home, and some are tendered receptions by friends. The forced absence from home is about over within that section of the state.—Jacksonville Metropolis.

Yellow Jack Conquered. The yellow fever is a thing of the past. There are no reports of new cases or of deaths; the last case under treatment was pronounced cured and discharged several days ago. Dr. Porter, state health officer has given out that all restrictions to travel and the going and coming of boats will be removed in a very few days, as soon as the time limit for mosquito infection shall be passed. This science has conquered the fever without the aid of frost, which in times past has been deemed the only agency that could effectually conquer the disease.—St. Andrews Buoy.

A Pious Judge. E. D. Beggs, judge of the Criminal Court of Escambia county, is not only a good judge, but a very pious man. He has recently returned to his home in Pensacola and when he learned that his neighbors' children had been kept at home from Sunday school, he at once invited them to his home and organized classes that are to meet there until quarantine is removed.—Jacksonville Metropolis.

Shedule Changed

The steamer City of Tampa will change its schedule, and will, in future, leave Pensacola at 1 o'clock p. m. instead 1:30 as heretofore.

Temporary Office

The Forbes Furniture Co. has established a temporary office on East Garden street, back of Avery's hardware store. Their patrons are requested to call at that place to transact all business.
